1. The first thing I noticed when I stepped out of the plane was the cold. It was a sharp contrast to the warm, humid air of Florida. The wind was biting, and the clouds were thick and grey. I had heard that the weather in the north was brutal, and now I knew it was true.
The snow was falling in soft, silent flakes, covering everything in a white blanket. The trees were bare, their branches reaching out like skeletal fingers.
The houses were small and cozy, with chimneys smoking and windows glowing with warm light. It was a scene of peace and quiet, a world away from the noise and chaos of the south. I had come here for a change, and it was exactly what I needed. The cold was refreshing, the silence was soothing, and the beauty was breathtaking. I had found a new home, and I was glad to be here.

1725 July 10. Sunday. A fine day. The weather was very warm and the sun shone brightly. We went for a walk in the park and saw many beautiful flowers. The children were very happy and played for hours. We also saw many birds and insects.
The day was very pleasant and we all enjoyed it very much.

On the 1st of May 1861

I received from you a letter of the 27th inst.

and was glad to hear from you.

I am well and hope these few lines will find you the same.

I have not much news to write at present.

I am still in the same place and hope to remain so for some time.
